

Get Connected!

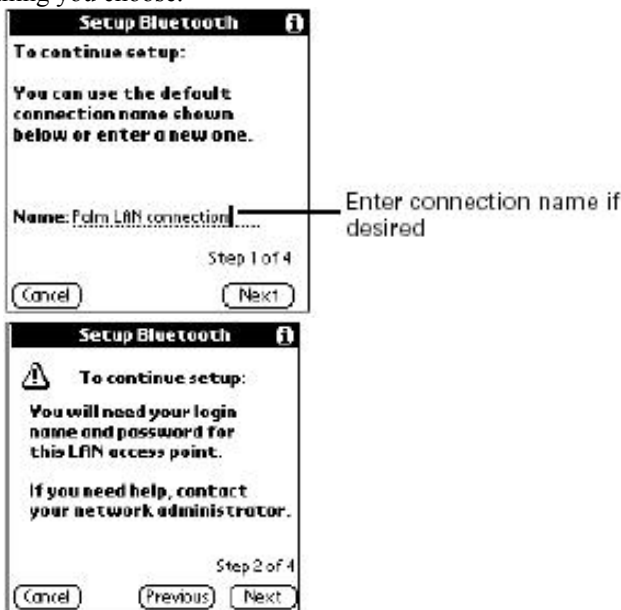

Follow these steps to connect your Palm to Red-M 1050AP: (applies for Bluetooth SDIO Card)

1. On the Bluetooth application screen, tap LAN.

Note: If your handheld does not find any LAN access points enabled with Bluetooth technology within range, you will receive a status message. You can try discovery again, or tap Ok to return to the Bluetooth screen. You may need to perform the discovery process several times.

2. (Optional) Enter a name for this connection, and then tap Next. This name identifies the connection between your handheld and a particular wireless LAN access point, and can be anything you choose.

4. (Optional) The LAN access point with which you are trying to connect may ask you for a passkey. If this occurs, enter the passkey "12345".
5. Enter your login name, tap the password box to enter password, enter your password, tap OK, and then tap next.

After you enter a login name, the Password field entry changes to "Assigned". If you tap Next without entering a login name, you will receive an error message.

3. Do one of the following:
 - If the LAN access point with which you wish to connect appears on the discovery results list, select the LAN access point name, and then tap OK.
 - If the LAN access point with which you wish to connect does not appear on the discovery results list, tap Find More, select the LAN access point name when it appears on the list, and then tap OK.]

6. Tap Next. If the Bluetooth application is unable to complete the connection with the LAN access point, you will receive an error message and be given the option to try connecting again.

If the Bluetooth application successfully connects with the LAN access point, a confirmation screen appears.
